

Jared Daigle, MA

Jared loves writing, teaching, and teaching about writing. He earned both his bachelors in English, Education, and Religious Studies and his master's in School Counseling from Marquette (Ring Out Ahoy!)

He believes that everyone can improve their writing skills, which even professional writers work to sharpen. He also adheres to the philosophy that people learn best when they are engaged and receive hands-on practice in skills that they will actually use. Finally, he believes that people learn best in an environment where they feel respected and that their contributions are valued.

During his free time, you can find him reading, watching sports, catching the latest superhero movie, and spending time with his wife and two young sons.

